Output: Mostly-true, the statement made by Donald Trump on 4/20/2016 that "Ted Cruz is mathematically out of winning the race" is mostly true. According to the delegate count from the New York Times (nytimes.com), Donald Trump had significantly more delegates than Ted Cruz. However, it's important to note that the race isn't officially over until a candidate reaches the required number of delegates to secure the nomination, which in 2016 was 1,237 delegates (abcnews.go.com). At the time of the statement, Trump had not yet reached this number, so technically Cruz was not mathematically eliminated. However, his path to victory was highly unlikely.

Politifact Ruling: Trump said, "Ted Cruz is mathematically out of winning the race." Cruz would need at the very least 678 more delegates to win the race. It's impossible for him to reach that number in the remaining primaries, given that there are just 674 delegates left to win. However, he could conceivably find more supporters in the states who've already held primaries, given that a few dozen are thus far uncommitted. Trump's statement is largely accurate but needs additional information. We rate it Mostly True. <https://www.politifact.com/factchecks/2016/apr/20/donald-trump/trump-largely-accurate-cruz-has-been-mathematicall/>

Final Output: False, there is no evidence from reliable sources to suggest that President Trump's limousine driver performed burnouts at the Daytona 500. The sources only confirm that Trump took a lap in his limousine.

PolitiFact Verdict: Sorry to disappoint, but no. A Facebook post shares an altered image of such a scene, along with a caption that says, "the presidential limo driver entertains the crowd during the rain delays at the Daytona 500 with smokey burnouts." [...] The image then got passed around as authentic. If such a thing happened in the First Car, we would all know about it. Final Output: 'half-true', The Obama administration did send $400 million to Iran, but whether this payment was a "ransom" is disputed and seems to depend on one's interpretation of the term.

Politifact Verdict: Trump said the Obama administration gave Iran "$400 million in ransom payment cash." On the same day in January, the United States paid Iran $400 million dollars, and Iran released several American prisoners. While there appears to be a quid pro quo — the United States would not give Iran the cash until the prisoners were on their way home — this does not equate to ransom, experts told us. [...] Trump's statement contains some element of truth but ignores critical facts that would give a different impression. We rate it Mostly False. <https://www.politifact.com/factchecks/2016/aug/24/donald-trump/donald-trump-calls-400-million-payment-iran-ransom/>
