Data Analysis

Additional details of statistical analysis for estimation of budget for out-patient care

For determining the risk-adjusted global budget for outpatient care, the association between the cost of providing outpatient services and different factors influencing the healthcare needs and the resource requirement was assessed using multiple linear regression. A list of potential demand and supply side factors which are reported to influence the demand for healthcare services, or the cost of services was prepared.^{17, 25-27} Finally, those factors for which valid data are generated regularly at the district level, and which are not amenable to reporting errors were chosen. For example, district-specific illness rate is likely to be an important determinant of outpatient care cost. However, a review of nationally representative surveys had suggested that the data on the illness rate is not available at the district level, and at a regular frequency.²⁷ Furthermore, due to the absence of electronic health records, the computation of illness rate is based on the data on self-reported illness collected during household surveys, which does not imply a definitive clinical diagnosis and can be confounded by positional objectivity.^{28, 29} On the other hand, the district-wise data of IMR is available in India at a regular frequency.²⁵ IMR is also considered a reliable indicator of population health.^{30, 31} In view of this, we used district specific IMR as an indicator of population health need.

Finally, the association of the outpatient care cost was assessed with the location of district hospital (type of city), district population size, IMR, proportional utilization in public hospital, proportion of population under 5 years and above 60 years of age (%), and bed strength of district hospital. To generate a sample of 100 health facilities, multivariate normal distribution (MVND)³² was applied for simulating data for tier 1, tier 2 and tier 3, separately based on different characteristics of 27 district of CHSI dataset.^{18, 33} All the parameters except type of city represented as continuous variables (outpatient cost, district population, infant mortality rate, utilization in public hospital, proportion of population under 5 years and above 60 years, and bed strength of the district hospital) followed normal distribution, so

MVND was used to simulate data using a vector of means of the individual covariates, and matrix consisting of the variances of the covariates along the main diagonal, and the covariance between each pair of covariates in the other matrix positions. As MVND defines the individual covariate distributions as well as maintains the systematic relationship between the covariates, thus, the simulated results approximate the original dataset of 27 district hospitals.

In order to explore the relationship between these factors and outpatient cost, we applied multiple linear regression model using ordinary least square method using equation 1. The multiple linear model is assumed to be:

$$Y = b_0 + b_1X_1 + b_2X_2 + \cdots + b_iX_i + e \quad (1)$$

where Y is the outcome variable, X_i is the value of the i^{th} predictor, and e is the error. Since the present analysis was using a perspective of developing norms for financing payments to be made to district hospitals, we included the full valuation of recurrent resources, as well as 20% of the capital costs. This was done since the majority of capital infrastructure in a district hospital exists already, and its expenditure is not repeated on an annual basis. However, 20% of capital cost was included to allow for maintenance of the existing capital infrastructure as well as its likely expansion. Normality of regress and error term for the model was checked using "Kolmogorov Smirnov Test" with insignificant p-values (0.854), and error term (0.701). The presence of homoscedasticity was checked using "Breusch-Pagan Test" with insignificant p-value (0.394), which failed to reject the null hypothesis of homoscedasticity. Thus, the assumptions of normality of regress and, the error term and presence of homoscedasticity were fulfilled for the model. There was no multicollinearity, with variance inflation value between 1 and 5.

Additional details of statistical analysis for budget impact assessment

The budgetary requirement for providing inpatient care was assessed at the specialty level, and computed as a product of the cost of delivering the services under HBPs as defined under PM-JAY, and the number of cases corresponding to each of the HBP in the preceding year.³³ However, the district hospitals also provide inpatient care for procedures which may not be part of the PM-JAY health benefit package. For such diseases/ procedures which are not covered under PM-JAY, the cost of providing inpatient care was assessed using the specialty-specific weighted average cost and volume of non-PM-JAY admissions, as explained in the equation below:

Estimated inpatient care payment

$$= \begin{cases} I_1 = \sum_{i=1}^n \sum_{j=1}^{m_i} c_{ij} a_{ij}, & \text{if package is included in PMJAY} \\ I_2 = \sum_{i=1}^n \left(\frac{\sum_{j=1}^{m_i} c_{ij} a_{ij}}{\sum_{j=1}^{m_i} a_{ij}} \right) * t_i, & \text{Else} \end{cases}$$ where n is total number of specialties, m_i is number of PM-JAY packages in i^{th} specialty, c_{ij} is the j^{th} package cost in i^{th} specialty, a_{ij} is number of j^{th} package claims in i^{th} specialty, t_i is number of non-PMJAY packages in i^{th} specialty,

$$\text{IPD Cost} = I_1 + I_2$$

Details of model for estimation of responsive resource allocation for outpatient care services for a district hospital which is being upgraded to medical college

The financial pay-out for providing outpatient care for a hospital which is being upgraded to a medical college is estimated based on the multiple linear regression model using district specific indicators.
